Breaking through the cycle of fear

Riding again.
A writer gains confidence while training for the TD Five Boro Bike Tour.

Patty Chang Anker's first bike was sparkly, with foot brakes and no gears. But when she was 10, her family moved from Canada to the Bronx.

"In the Bronx, no one I knew had a bike," Anker said. "It wasn't safe to ride. So there ended my bike career."

Three decades later, the yoga teacher and mother of two who blogs at Facing Forty Upside Down, is back in the saddle as she joins 32,000 other cyclists riding in the TD Five Boro Bike Tour on Sunday.

The 40-mile ride, which begins in Lower Manhattan and weaves through every borough before ending in Staten Island, is symbolic for Anker, author of "SOME NERVE: Lessons Learned While Becoming Brave."

Growing up, Anker said, she was more bookish than adventurous, and cycling is still firmly outside of her comfort zone.

"I'm Asian," Anker said laughing. "I wasn't groomed to do anything fun."

When she had children, something clicked. She didn't want them to grow up feeling limited by fear the way she always had.

Her blog was born, and "I didn't really ride until we had kids, and I felt like they should learn. We live in the suburbs now, and I felt like I had no credibility telling them to try something I couldn't do." Patty Chang Anker then the book, which investigates how ordinary people face their fears.

"I'm a really good student so I did the adult 'Learn to Ride' lesson with Bike New York," she said.

Samuel Slaton, the Communications Director of Bike New York, asked Anker to blog about her experiences for Biking the Big Apple, the organization's official blog.

"She really is inspiring, and her story has been a huge encouragement to others who were hesitant to take on the 40-mile tour," Slaton said. "She inspired over 40 folks to sign up and join her group."

Team Some Nerve will wear yellow on Sunday.

"We'll have on T-shirts the color of sunshine," Anker said. "And big goofy grins."

Five things to know

- A blind man from the Bronx will be biking in the tour this year. The Daily News reports that Chris Wilkinson, 67, will be riding a tandem bike with his training partner, Jack Maged, 65.
- The 40-mile route will be traffic-free, meaning that five bridges, five highways and various streets across the city will be shut down for five-hour stretches on Sunday.

The ride will pass through all five boroughs. / AARON ADLER, METRO

- Backpacks, hydration packs and bags larger than 420 cubic inches are banned at this year's event. Cyclists will have to pack supplies in saddle bags, fanny packs, or water bottles. Rehydration stations will be set up on the route.

- Cyclists are allowed to listen to music while they ride, but New York State Law mandates that they can only have one earbud in at a time.
- The money raised from registration fees will go toward Bike New York's free bicycle education program, which last year taught more than 15,000 New Yorkers how to ride a bike.

TLC approves 30-cent taxi fare surcharge to fund more handicap cabs

New York City taxi fares will soon get a 30-cent surcharge to fund an increase in handicap cabs, according to rules approved by the Taxi and Limousine Commission on Wednesday.

The surcharge would be applied to all fares starting next January and used to make half of the city's taxi fleet wheelchair-accessible.

Currently, only 631 of about 14,000 taxis in the city are wheelchair-accessible, though some 90,000 residents and visitors use wheelchairs on a daily basis, according to city agencies.

Under the rules, supported by the TLC board of commissioners, 7,500 taxis would be wheelchair accessible by 2020.

Murder. A man was arrested in the abduction and killing of Menachem Stark, according to reports.

One of three men in custody for the kidnapping and murder of a Brooklyn landlord confessed, according to media reports Wednesday.

Menachem Stark, 39, was last seen on surveillance footage leaving his office in Williamsburg when two men forced him into a van just before midnight on Jan. 2, police said. The married father of seven was found 16 miles away on Long Island the next day, in a dumpster at a gas station in Great Neck, New York.

The motive was unclear at press time but DNAinfo.com reported investigators believe Stark's kidnappers were hired by a local contractor angry at him for an outstanding debt. They were only meant to frighten Stark into paying, the source told DNAinfo, and police believe the men accidentally killed him.

Bridge jumpers suspected in upstate murder

The man and woman who jumped off the George Washington Bridge and died Monday had killed an elderly man they were living with in upstate New York, police officials said Wednesday.

The couple, Gary Crockett, 41, and Nickie Circelli, 40, were pulled from the Hudson River alive but died at a nearby hospital, according to Port Authority Police.

Cops believe that the couple, both of Suffern, New York, had killed Circelli's uncle before leaping from the bridge while holding hands, local authorities said Wednesday.

Suffern police said the pair had been living with Circelli's 70-year-old uncle when he discovered they were stealing from him. Police believe the couple killed him sometime on Monday. ANNA SANDERS Holstered. More than 155 firearms were captured in the operation.

A family of alleged gun traffickers were indicted on Wednesday after local authorities shut down a firearm pipeline between Brooklyn and Georgia.

New York City Police Department Commissioner Bill Bratton and Brooklyn District Attorney Ken Thompson released a 558-count indictment against six suspects while standing alongside a spread of firearms confiscated after the seven-month investigation.

In all, police picked up at least 155 firearms, including an AR-15, a MAC-11, two TEC-9 automatic weapons and 151 other varieties of pistols.

Michael Brewer Quick, 32, allegedly made at least 13 trips between LaGrange, Georgia, and Brooklyn's Canarsie section, each time bringing up as many as 25 firearms at a time. Quick would then unknowingly sell the weapons to an undercover police officer.

"The apparently easy accessibility of these weapons threatened the safety and security of our Brooklyn communities," Thompson said.

History. Council holds its first hearing on municipal ID cards

Despite what an administration official admitted on Wednesday was an "aggressive timeline," lawmakers are confident a plan to develop a municipal ID program will go live before year's end.

Boosted by Mayor Bill de Blasio's commitment to the proposal, the City Council held its first hearing on the program that would offer ID cards to 500,000 residents living in New York City without residency or citizenship documentation.

"Let it be known and let it be clear," City Council Speaker Melissa Mark-Viverito said, "that this is a priority of this New York City Council and we will have municipal IDs in New York City."

Mindy Tarlow, director of the mayor's operations office, told the council that they were conscious of concerns from the immigrant community that an ID program might put undocumented residents at risk.

"This administration is emphatically committed to protecting the privacy of information gathered from this initiative," Tarlow testified.

The council questioned what the city could do to make a city-provided ID card more attractive to all residents, including discounts to institutions or access to public libraries.

NBA owners likely to force Sterling to sell

Removing Sterling.

The board's advisory finance committee will hold a meeting today to go over the next steps.

The National Basketball Association's 29 team owners will likely vote to force Donald Sterling to sell the Los Angeles Clippers after he was banned for life for racist comments, some of the owners said on Wednesday.

As it appeared more likely the team would be put up for sale, talk show host turned media businesswoman Oprah Winfrey emerged among potential buyers who have expressed interest. Senators ready to try again on cybersecurity legislation

U.S. administration officials, private sector executives and privacy advocates are reviewing a draft of a bill that would encourage sharing of cybersecurity data between the government and companies, two key Senators said on Wednesday.

Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Dianne Feinstein, a California Democrat, and Vice Chairman Saxby Chambliss, a Georgia Republican, said they have circulated the draft to key stakeholders in its early stages to avoid the disagreements that have thwarted passage in the past.

Lawmakers have been considering legislation to provide clarity about how private companies should be required to disclose security breaches. REUTERS

Opposition. Senate Republicans block bid to hike minimum wage

U.S. Senate Republicans on Wednesday blocked one of President Barack Obama's top legislative priorities, a bill to raise the federal minimum wage for the first time in five years.

On a nearly party-line vote of 54-42, supporters fell short of the 60 votes that would have been needed to end a procedural roadblock against the legislation in the Democratic-led Senate.

Just one Republican, Sen. Bob Corker of Tennessee, joined Democrats in voting to advance the bill.

Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid switched his vote from yes to no to reserve his right to bring up the bill again.

President Barack Obama attacked Republicans over their opposition at an event at the White House later in the day where he again argued that 16 million minimum-wage workers deserve a raise.

Democrats argue that an increase would boost the economy overall. / GETTY IMAGES

The bill would increase the minimum wage to $10.10 per hour during the next three years and then adjust it for inflation in the future. The federal minimum wage is now $7.25 an hour.

The non-partisan Congressional Budget Office estimated that the bill would raise the wages of about 16.5 million Americans and lift 900,000 out of poverty. REUTERS

Oklahoma. Botched execution reignites death penalty debate

Oklahoma inmate Clayton Lockett died during a botched execution on Tuesday, minutes after a doctor had called a halt to the procedure, raising more questions about new death penalty cocktails used by the state and others.

Thirteen minutes after a doctor administered a lethal injection at the state's death chamber in McAlester, Lockett lifted his head and started mumbling. The doctor halted the execution, said state corrections department spokesman Jerry Massie.

Lockett died of an apparent massive heart attack about 40 minutes after the procedure started.

"We believe that a vein was blown and the drugs weren't working as they were designed to. The director ordered a halt to the execution," Massie said. REUTERS

'Superbugs' that can overpower antibiotics are spreading

The spread of deadly superbugs that evade even the most powerful antibiotics is no longer a prediction but is happening right now across the world, United Nations officials said.

Antibiotic resistance has the potential to affect anyone, of any age, in any country, the U.N.'s World Health Organization said in a report. It is now a major threat to public health and "the implications will be devastating". REUTERS

Blame. The new Ukrainian government claims Russia is behind the unrest.

Pro-Moscow separatists seized government offices in more Ukrainian towns on Wednesday, in a further sign that authorities in Kiev are losing control of the country's eastern industrial heartland bordering Russia.

Gunmen who turned up at dawn took control of official buildings in Horlivka, a town of almost 300,000 people, said a Reuters photographer. They refused to be photographed.

The heavily armed men wore the same military uniforms without insignia as other unidentified "green men" who have joined pro-Russian protesters with clubs and chains in seizing control of towns across Ukraine's Donbass coal and steel belt.

Attempts to contain the insurgency by the government in Kiev have proved largely unsuccessful, with security forces repeatedly outmaneuvered by the separatists.

Daniel Baer, the U.S. ambassador to the OSCE, a European security watchdog which has monitors in the region, told reporters in Vienna: "I think it's very clear that what is happening would not be happening without Russian involvement." REUTERS

Some 30 pro-Russian separatists also seized a city council building in Alchevsk, further east in Luhansk region, Interfax-Ukraine news agency said.

V. Stiviano is v. saddened by Sterling's ouster

V. Stiviano might be many things (namely, an artist, lover, writer, chef, poet, stylist and philanthropist, according to her Instagram), but she is not heartless.

Stiviano, who recently gained notoriety as Donald Sterling's alleged ex-lover, is "very saddened" by the NBA's decision to place a lifetime ban on Sterling, reports the Los Angeles Times. Her lawyer Mac Nehoray told the Times that Stiviano "never wanted to harm Donald."

He also claimed that Stiviano did not release the recordings and is mortified about the incident. Nehoray said "someone released it for money" — but someone who was not Stiviano. "My client is devastated that this got out," he told the Times. Nehoray told the Los Angeles Times that he and Stiviano have an idea who the person is. Nehoray stated that Stiviano, 31, was never in a relationship with Sterling, 80. "It's nothing like it's been portrayed," Nehoray said. "She's not the type of person everyone says." He said Sterling's estranged wife Rochelle was friends with Stiviano and knew that Sterling had purchased an apartment for her.

He also described Stiviano as an upstanding citizen who worked as a waitress and volunteered to help crime victims before starting her job as an archivist for Sterling.

Back to 'Back to'

Houston, do you copy?

For "Moon Landing," Blunt enlisted Tom Rothrock, who produced "Back to Bedlam," the album that spawned the "one song that the whole world knows" Blunt speaks of, "You're Beautiful." One song on the new album that feels especially personal is "Miss America," a tribute to Whitney Houston.

"What was interesting and tragic about her was that the insight into her life overtook her talent," says Blunt. "Amy Winehouse was something similar ... where we spectate to such a degree that we almost become players in their downfall, because every time we buy a magazine to read about their worst moments ... another paparazzi is sent out; and with every new lens pointed in their faces, I think their world becomes that much smaller and their problems much more intense."

Coming in for a 'Landing'

For the "Moon Landing" tour, Blunt and his band bring outer space into the venue. / GETTY IMAGES

To be Blunt. The singer who made his name with "You're Beautiful" has some harsh words for critics and new words for himself.

James Blunt has come to terms with the success that made him a household name almost a decade ago. And with his new album, "Moon Landing," he says he was finally able to produce a collection of songs that is almost a logical extension of his 2004 debut, "Back to Bedlam."

"This album is the album I would have written and recorded if the other albums hadn't sold the way they did," he says. "These are songs that are personal. ... I suppose a great example is ... 'Goodbye My Lover' on the first album, which is opening yourself up, and then to have it be a commercial success you also get a lot of criticism."

When the topic of criticism comes up, Blunt reveals his acid tongue in a hilariously lightning-fast rant.

"I don't sing songs about how big and strong I am," he says. "I was in the Army for six years and I know how perfectly strong I am. I was in the war and I know how hard and rough it is to get in a serious fight. So instead of singing about that, I sing about my weakness. ... Any critique you have is probably from one guy in his bedroom with his trousers around his ankles in the shadows, feeling brave as a result."

It's taken a while for Blunt to come to this level of acceptance.

"My first record I cut to try and get a record deal, and I did," he says. "I made the album as an innocent and naive recording, then being on that indie label as I was, it became mainstream with one song that the whole world knows. And because of that I wrote a reactionary album called 'All Lost Souls.' It wasn't written to embrace the new audience I had. ... And then the third album I did embrace it more — there's fun to be had as a pop star, and so I wrote songs for my arenas. ... But with all the fun ... it wasn't nearly as fulfilling as when you are writing something much more personal."

What you'll see

'The Amazing Spider-Man 2'

1 The second in a reboot of a franchise that happened only last decade deviates from the originals, having Andrew Garfield's Spidey fight Electro (Jamie Foxx) and — oh wait, Green Goblin (Dane DeHaan) is here too. That's not new.

Andrew Garfield's Spider-Man whimsically tosses a device that's probably highly dangerous in his latest outing. / NIKO TAVERNISE

2 'Belle'

The strangely obscure story of Dido Elizabeth Belle (Gugu Mbatha-Raw), an heiress of mixed race who struggled to navigate 18th century England, gets a very Jane Austen-style movie, albeit one that slips politics in among the courting.

3 'Ida'

Pawel Pawlikowski ("My Summer of Love") directs this mordant drama, about a novice nun (Agata Trzebuchowska) on a road trip with her boozing aunt (Agata Kulesza) to find the grave of her parents, murdered by Nazis.

4 'The Protector 2'

In 2010, Thai butt-kicker Tony Jaa ("Ong-Bak") quit acting to become a monk. Luckily, he came back. Before he pops up in "Fast & Furious 7," see him in his comeback picture, a sequel to his 2005 stunner.

5 'Beneath the Harvest Sky'

A recent Tribeca Film Festival player, this drama has Maine teen boys eking out existences during the fall potato harvest.

6 'Decoding Annie Parker'

Samantha Morton and Helen Hunt headline this ensemble drama as, respectively, a woman with cancer and a geneticist researching it. Aaron Paul, Rashida Jones, Alice Eve and others co-star.

7 'The Other Woman'

Nick Cassavetes ("The Notebook") does another film his father, director

John Cassavetes, likely never would've touched: A comedy in which three women (Cameron Diaz, Leslie Mann and Kate Upton) gang up on the man they're all sleeping with, assuming monogamy.

8 'Brick Mansions'

Ten years ago the French film "District B13" introduced parkour to action films. Now it has been remade with the late Paul Walker as the good cop in an "Escape From New York"-style criminal compound.

Gugu Mbatha-Raw

Where you've seen her: An English actress, she was co-lead in the Kiefer Sutherland show "Touch." She played Ophelia in the stage production of "Hamlet" starring Jude Law, which played the West End and Broadway.

Where she is now: In the Jane Austen-y "Belle," she plays Dido Elizabeth Belle, a real-life mixed-race heiress who lived in 18th-century London.

Where she's going: She has a key role in the Wachowskis' "Jupiter Ascending" with Channing Tatum, Mila Kunis and Eddie Redmayne. She'll also star in the rom-com "Blackbird" with Minnie Driver and Danny Glover.

Mbatha-Raw plays an heiress in the historical costume drama "Belle." / GETTY IMAGES

Meet Gugu Mbatha-Raw

Intros. The English actress hits the big time playing a real-life mixed-race heiress in "Belle."

On playing an obscure historical personage:

There's a book coming out now, but there wasn't a lot of information about Dido at the time. We do know she lived in the house. There was a report by an American businessman who came to visit. We know she wasn't allowed to sit with them at the dinner table, but she'd come out after. This guy was completely shocked by that. We also know Lord Mansfield [master of the house she lived in] left her money in his will. That was pretty unusual at the time, to be held in such affection.

On using a painting of Dido as an influence: The painting was a big clue, where she's depicted in a sumptuous gown and she's looking directly at the viewer. She's not in a subservient position. She was relatively equal to [her cousin] Elizabeth in the painting. All those little pieces of detective work inspired the story.

On Dido having to skip out on social events at home:

I think she repressed those daily humiliations. The racism that is depicted in the script is not the brutality we often see on the screen. It's more about the nuances of society, which can be just as painful, in a different way, on an emotional level. That scene where she's staring in the mirror after she's asked why she doesn't dine with the family — all of that inequality that she's been pushing down explodes.

On the film's portrait of female struggles: The marriage market in that period was ruthless. And yet Dido was financially secure. She could marry for love, she had an inheritance, unlike her cousin, who needed to find her financial security. I'm glad it's not as savage today, but this is still something that people deal with in different parts of the world. Arranged marriages and women's freedom and equality are still questions.

On the costumes: The costumes are so helpful as well. Wearing a corset certainly changes your posture entirely and gives you a whole different way of moving and using your physicality.

On Dido as a role model: I think it's important for bi-racial girls even now to be able to see themselves in history. I think if you can root yourself in a historical place, then the sky's the limit, really.

On "Belle" as a twist on the Jane Austen film: "I grew up watching 'Pride and Prejudice,' with Colin Firth, and 'Sense and Sensibility.' Heidi Klum spills her best style secrets Model behavior.

Steal the supermodel's tips for looking good even when you're pressed for time.

Heidi Klum is a top model, businesswoman, TV host and mom. But she still made time to tell us her beauty secrets and tips for looking good even when you're crazy busy.

What beauty products do you rely on to look glamorous even when you're frazzled?

I wear a lot of mascara and a beautiful lipstick. I like to talk with my eyes, so I need a lot of mascara.

What's your beauty routine on your days off?

On my days off, I don't do too much. I might put on a BB cream to hide imperfections, but I don't put a lot of makeup on. It's good to give your skin a break and go natural every once in a while.

Do you only wear high heels to work, or do you wear them every day?

I wear them as much as possible because when I don't wear them and I walk into a room, people go, "You are so much shorter than I thought!" I'm 5'9," but this is what happens because I think most people think of me as an Amazon woman. So when I have to meet new people I'm always in heels.

Do you have any tips for buying shoes?

When you go into a shoe store and try shoes on, you really have to walk around and see if you can actually walk. So many times in the shoe store, you put the shoes on, and you're like: "Yeah, they fit." And you bring them home and realize that you can't walk in them. There's nothing more unattractive than when a woman can't walk in heels. You should really know how to walk them before you buy them. Otherwise it's better to go a little shorter in a heel.

Are there any hot trends

Hot mama

What is your best tip to getting dressed when you're a busy mom with a job?

My best tip is to get rid of all the things that don't look good, so you don't have the temptation to wear those things again. Maybe just try things on in front of an honest friend that will tell you if it doesn't look good on you. Sometimes jeans are just too tight, even though you feel like they fit. It's good to get rid of things, like the baggy sweatpants you should not be wearing anymore. I like to slouch around too, but I don't let myself go too slouchy. So the super-slouchy things — goodbye!

Is your phone hurting your love life?

Sex, cells. A new study links excessive use of cellphones with impotence.

According to a recent study, there's a possible link between carrying around a switched-on mobile phone and impotence.

Mobile phones have been blamed for all sorts of modern ailments, from chronic stress to brain tumors. Now medical researchers in Austria and Egypt have added yet another condition to the list. The conclusions of their study, published in the Central European Journal of Urology, indicate that intensive daily exposure to a switched-on mobile phone could be linked to erectile dysfunction.

Researchers studied two groups of men over six years, noting that there was no significant difference between the two groups in terms of age, weight, height, smoking habits or testosterone levels.

However, a difference was observed in the amount of time the men spent with their phone turned on and in their hand or pocket. Those suffering from erectile dysfunction carried a switched-on mobile phone 4.4 hours per day on average, compared to just 1.8 hours per day for the men who did not experience impotence.

I scream, you scream and men with erectile dysfunction scream for this type of ice cream. ISTOCKPHOTO

That's cool. Get ready for Viagra ice cream

Ice cream company Lick Me I'm Delicious will give you more than an oral tingle. The England-based group's famed dessert, dubbed "The Arousal," is laced with Viagra to give any well-respecting male host the necessary lift to keep the fun and games going well into the night. Inventor Charlie Harry Francis explains why he's giving new meaning to "having seconds."

When you created this Viagra ice cream, did you want the taste to add to the sensuality?

It made sense for me to reference aphrodisiacs like oysters, but I wouldn't say it was the tastiest thing — it doesn't mix well with cream. In the end, we moved to champagne, so each ball (funny word) had 35 milligrams of Viagra in it, which is a basic dose (1-2 tablets). Then we made each ball separately so that it had the correct amount in it.

Did it work on you?

[Laughs] No, no I didn't try it with Viagra. There's actually a reason I can't, but I'm not sure I want to share that.

Is this the oddest ice cream flavor that you've created?

Viagra is the funniest, but the oddest was the glow-in-the-dark ice cream because of the science behind it, which uses jellyfish luminescence. If you lick it, it glows, which is pretty exciting. Your tongue acts like a light bulb switch.

DON'T LET THE HEADLINES RIP APART YOUR ROMANCE

Dating and hooking up can be exciting processes of discovery shared between two or more people who love each others' genitals. Sometimes your fact-finding activities lead to less-than-desirable revelations. One minute you're laughing and the next, a hot-button news item pops up and triggers a fiery debate. If this sounds like something that would get you pissed off, hot and a little bit turned on, don't necessarily let headlines rip your potential relationships apart.

Vote for your mutual pleasure. It should always win. If you are currently interested in dating someone further along the political spectrum than you are, here are a few tips to keep the passion burning without igniting any damaging explosions:

Have adult conversations

Do not distract, evade, deflect or otherwise attempt to manipulate your partner into believing you are someone or something that you are not. Be honest about your political leanings, and agree to not discuss certain topics or walk away from the relationship if needed.

Think outside of the box

Nightlife. Miss Scorpio opens up about Gemini & Scorpio parties

The nightlife scene has shifted. Thrill-seekers are tired of flashing ID, putting up with the bridge-and-tunnel crowd and listening to an iTunes-generated playlist of over-exposed pop songs. Jamie Kiffel (Miss Gemini) and Larisa Fuchs (Miss Scorpio) know this, which is why they began throwing their own parties, attracting the types of people they want to meet and generating exclusive invite lists.

Kiffel and Fuchs met in 2002 when Kiffel moved in to Fuchs' ex-boyfriend's place. The two bonded over tales of their online dating experiences, and planned to write a book about dating. They began compiling cool events going on around town (subscribe at www.geminianscorpio.com) and throwing their own parties as an extra to their intended book in hopes of attracting the kind of creative types they wanted to meet, and because they wanted to suggest interesting date ideas.

"We'd already been throwing some spectacular themed costume house parties in [my] ex's home," Fuchs says. "We started out doing just one party a year, on Valentine's Day."

In October 2011, Fuchs found her dream party loft in Gowanus. The fetes boast unusual themes, costumes, burlesque acts, live bands, elaborate decor, aerial and fire artists and after-hours delights.

Fuchs says she is amazed at how big the parties have become. "It's wild," she says. "I know a few babies born to couples who met at our events."

Follow the money, all right

Re: 'Climate cha-ching' (Metro, April 30) While I agree that Mother Nature is an unpredictable force, I find it astonishing that far too many low-information citizens see the green movement as a money grab, when we're practically paying the equivalent of a gallon of milk for a gallon of gas. The fossil-fuel industry and speculative trading is fleecing the average consumer. Although we cannot "control" nature, why is being better stewards of the planet by lowering our carbon footprints — as well the introduction of renewables, which will allow greater access and lower costs to consumers — perceived as part of a nefarious liberal agenda? The outrage is due to ignorance of scientific facts.

1 Off the deep end

The Rangers' depth was in full display over the course of the series. The triumvirate of Dan Carcillo, Jesper Fast and J.T. Miller all saw time with Brad Richards and Carl Hagelin, and the trio produced, finishing with two goals and three assists for five points in the seven game series.

2 Getting defensive

The Rangers' defense kept Scott Hartnell, Claude Giroux and Jakub Voracek relatively in check. Philadelphia's top line finished four goals and nine assists for 13 points in the seven-game series, but the trio was not the dominant force it typically is.

The power play needs to produce if the Rangers hope to play into June. The man advantage was a disadvantage against the Flyers, going 3-for-29 and 0 for their last 21.

Something stinks

Winston cited for stealing crab legs

Sometimes a man just has to have some seafood. Heisman Trophy-winning QB Jameis Winston was cited for shoplifting Wednesday after taking $32 worth of crab legs and crawfish from a supermarket without paying. He was not arrested, but the citation carries with it 20 hours of community service. The 20-year-old was also suspended from the Florida State baseball team.
